AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the Vigor is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

Mr. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., (Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using Ayer's Hair Vigor the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the Vigor, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

FATHER'S GROWING OLD, JOHN.

Our father's growing old, John,
His eyes are growing dim,
And years are on his shoulders laid,
A heavy load for him;
And you and I are young and hale,
And each a stalwart man,
And we must make his load as light
And as easy as we can.

He used to take the brunt, John,
At the cradle and the plow,
And earned our porridge by the sweat
That trickled down his brow.
Yet never heard him whimper pain,
What'er his toil might be,
Nor wanted e'er a welcome seat
Upon his solid knee.

And when our boy strength came, John,
And sturdy grew each limb,
He brought us to the yellow field,
To share the toil with him;
But he went foremost in the swath,
Tossing aside the grain,
Just like the plow that heaves the soil,
Or ships that cleave the main.

Now we must lead the van, John,
Through weather foul and fair,
And let the old man read and doze
And tilt his easy chair,
And he'll not mind it, John, you know,
At eve to turn us over
Those brave old days of British times—
Our grandfathers and the war.

I heard you speak of ma'am, John;
"Tha' go-pet what you say,
That curing for the like of us
Has turned her hair to gray.
Yet John, I do remember well
When neighbors called her vain,
And when her hair was long and like
A gleaming sheaf of grain.

Her lips were cherry-red, John,
Her cheeks were rosy and fair,
And like a ripened peach they swelled
Against her wavy hair;
Her step fell lightly as the leaf
From off the summer tree,
And all day, busy at her wheel,
She sung to you and me.

She had a pious aim, John,
That welded well the rod,
When'er with willful stray our feet
The path forbidden trod.
But to the heaven of her eye
We never looked in vain;
And evermore our yielding cry
Brought down her tears like rain.

But this was long ago, John,
And we are what we are;
And little heed we day by day,
Her falling cheek and hair;
And when beneath her faithful breast
The tide no longer stir,
Tis then, John, we the most shall feel
We had no friends like her.

Yes, father's growing old, John,
His eyes are growing dim,
And mother's treading softly down
The deep descent with him;
But you and I are young and hale,
And each a stalwart man,
And we must make their paths as smooth
And level as we can.

The Saxon Dienstmann.

The dienstmann is an institution and a character deserving of special and honorable mention. There are a great many of them in every German city, but I have to deal with him as he lives and has his being in Chemnitz. Of course he is in uniform. All public servants, from the scavenger to the highest official, wear a uniform, and he is no exception to the rule. He stands on a street corner, or in the middle of a square, and he is ready to fly to you at the sound of your whistle, whether it be pitched high or low, sharp or flat, shrill or plaintive. He is the public messenger, is this dienstmann, and he is the most reliable, if not the quickest vehicle for the transmission of notes and portable property that I have ever had the pleasure of meeting. There is something Parisian about his personal appearance, and I think it is the blue blouse which he wears. He and the blue blouse are one and indissoluble. I sometimes imagine him to be next of kin to the man who ripped up the pavements of the French capital, erected barricades across the streets, and fought the soldiers of the coup d'etat from behind them. The dienstmann wears a heavy leather belt around his waist; it is fastened in the center by a heavy brass buckle, and from this side is suspended a heavy, leathery bag. His hat is of gilded leather, black as jet, and a deep red band surrounds it, which gives a highly picturesque appearance. By his hat do you know him in a crowd, and you can always pick him out at a long range.

The dienstmann is not only the servant of the public, but he is also the servant of a company, about whose assets and liabilities I know nothing. He has a superintendent over him, and he is well watched. He must be sober, faithful, and intelligent. He must know everything, or nearly everything, and he is expected to perform the jobs which are thrown in his way with a reasonable degree of alacrity. Besides he must be neat in appearance and very polite. The dienstmann is called upon by every lady to do almost everything. He will take a telegram to the office, mail a letter, deliver a love message, carry home a sack of flour, or wheel the baby buggy. He will help to move a family, take care of a market basket, fetch you a cup of coffee, brush your clothes, black your shoes, or shave you in an emergency. He is full of miscellaneous information regarding the names of streets, the occupants of houses, the hours of arrival and departure of trains, or the weather probabilities. He will sometimes carry boxes and packages of immense weight on his shoulder, and at other times he will fetch you change for a one hundred mark piece. When you send him on an errand he will find the place to which you have directed him, and if the person he is seeking is out, he will travel over creation until he finds him. He never shirks work, and he never charges you for carriage hire. His prices are ridiculously low. He will take a note a mile away and bring you back an answer for about seven cents. He will carry a heavy package to your home, twelve Chicago blocks distant, for ten cents. I have employed him frequently for an entire forenoon at a cost of thirty cents.

If he takes a package or a letter from you he gives you a yellow ticket, on which appears his number. If he loses the package, the company is held, and holds itself responsible. You can not live in Saxony without handling an assortment of yellow tickets every day. You get a ticket for everything. When you pay your fare on the street car, the conductor gives you a yellow ticket. Before reaching the end of your trip, another official enters the car and tears a corner off the ticket. If you send a package by express you receive a yellow ticket, and if you receive an express package you get a yellow ticket. If you send money by mail you get two yellow tickets, one for the consignee and one for yourself, and when the consignee receives the money he also receives a yellow coupon, and signs a yellow ticket. When you buy a bill of goods in a store you are handed a yellow ticket, and when they are delivered at your house the bundle-boy gives you another yellow ticket and takes the one you first received. I don't know whether the minister who officiates at a wedding gives the bride and groom yellow tickets or not, but I believe they must have one when their first baby is born. If you live at 3796 B street, and you move to 3795 A street, you must go to the City Hall and get a yellow ticket. If a servant-girl leaves Mrs. X, and goes to work for Mrs. XX, she must also go to the City Hall and get a yellow ticket. It is probable that the Saxon goes into the next world with a yellow ticket in his hand, but that is another point upon which I have no definite information.—

THE Supreme Court of the United States has decided that the law of Alabama prohibiting "miscegenation" is not in conflict with the "Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, or with the civil rights legislation founded upon it, for the reason that it applies the same punishment to both offenders, the white and the black, without discrimination."

It costs something to bury a Congressman. The bill for the preparation of the body of the late Thomas Allen, its transportation to Pittsfield, Mass., and burial there, has just been audited and paid out of the Treasury. The total amount was $2,967. It is a singular fact that while the itemized account contains for Apollinaris water, hams, sardines, spring chickens, turkeys, sugar, ice, etc., only the insignificant sum of $4 was squandered on bread and butter.

WHY THE SOUTH DOESN'T GET RICH.

Where the Money Goes Which Her Farmers Dig From the Soil.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

Where has all this money gone? What has become of the $80,000,000 that our farms have given us as the total value of four leading crops?

The answer comes back to us from every side. The desk on which we write was brought from the North, and so was the pencil with which we write. Part of the eighty millions was sent out of the State to buy the carpet on our office floor, the curtains on its windows, the ink-stand in front of us, the knife, the paper-cutter, the chair we sit in, the shoes, coat, breeches, buttons, vest, collar, cravat, underclothes, and hats we wear; the sofa in the corner, the wardrobe, washstand, the bowl and pitcher and slop bowl, the stove, the spittoons, the match box and matches, the mantelpiece, the locks on the doors, the files for our newspapers, the mangle pot and the mangle, the water bucket and dipper, the scissors, and even the waste basket. The only home-made thing in the room is a knock-kneed white deal table that is a disgrace to its section, and the writer of the lines, who, to say the least of it, is not knock-kneed.

This is where the money goes. Out of the State to buy about everything that we wear or use—all that clothes our wives and children, or decorates our homes. Such a drain, constant and strong, for small things as well as large, will consume many a million of the dollars that the patient and strong-armed farmers have dug out of the ground.

What we need to supplement the splendid work of our farmers is manufactures. We need factories that will supply the articles we are now sending money out of the State to buy. We are moving rapidly in that direction. New factories are being built and new articles made at home. Even now we note that the watch at which we have glanced to catch the time, and the humble but useful broom that a rat has just tumbled down behind our office door, and the sashes that the keen west wind is rattling in our windows, formerly all imported, were all made right here in Atlanta. But until a great many more factories are built within our borders we will be waiting to know where the money goes as the totals year after year are footed up.

DELAWARE's whipping-post law provides that criminals convicted of murder in the second degree shall be imprisoned for life and whipped at the beginning of their term. An effort was made last week in the Legislature to abolish this provision, but it failed. The Wilmington News remarks: "The whipping-post is without doubt a singularly efficacious mode of punishment for certain offenses, but it is doubtful if it has any restraining or corrective influence on an individual who is about to be imprisoned for life."

OTTO HOLSTEIN, well known throughout all this section of Kentucky, was found dead in his room at Sturdevant House, New York, last Sunday morning. Heart disease it is supposed, was the cause of his death. Mr. Holstein was one of the best posted stock men in the country; wrote a great deal about fine stock, and was regarded as authority on all matters relating to pedigrees. He was a man of many fine social qualities, and many friends will mourn his unlooked for death.

Circulars are being sent to soldiers in different sections of the country, by Western parties, that for ten dollars one hundred and sixty acres of good land will be secured without the formality of occupying it for four years—less the time of serving in the army, as provided by law. The Land Commissioner at Washington states that the law remains unchanged, and that the circulars are for the purpose of deception. Soldiers will therefore take timely warning.

A professional "masher" was fined $100 and costs at Chicago.

PERSONALS.

Points About People Here and Elsewhere.

Misses Maggie Helmer and Annie King are visiting friends at Stone Lick.

Mr. John R. Broadt, of Stone Lick, has returned from Cincinnati much improved in health. His mill will be run regularly hereafter.

Mrs. John A. Gano, of Bourbon county, the mother of Gen. Gano, fell down a flight of stairs a few days ago and broke her arm.

The Lexington Transcript says: Hon. J. D. Kehoe is a candidate for re-election as Representative from Mason County. He made a good record in the last Legislature, and is both "a gentleman and scholar."

Mr. Hanson Penn Diltz is in the city, to-day. We are glad to learn from him that his book "The Duchesse Undine" is meeting with a ready sale.

Opera House—Two Performances To-day.

It will delight many of our readers who could not be present at the Opera House last night to hear that the Fogg's Ferry Combination will remain with us one day longer and give two performances to-day, at the matinee this afternoon at 2 o'clock presenting Fogg's Ferry and to-night for the first time in this city the beautiful drama, founded upon Whittier's celebrated poem, "Maud Muller," with Miss Carrie Stuart, the "Chip" of Fogg's Ferry, as Maud Muller, the pretty haymaker. All who witnessed the performance by this excellent company last night will join with us in recommending this company as one of the very best that has ever visited us, and we can promise to all who may attend an evening of rare enjoyment.

A DESPATCH to the Louisville Commercial from Catlettsburg, says:

Neal and Craft will not be tried at Grayson next week, for the reason that the two most important witnesses for the prosecution are quite ill and will be unable to attend the trial. This information was gained to-day by your reporter from very reliable sources, and he was also told by an attorney for the prisoners that the defense would not be ready, because most of their witnesses were poor and unable to pay their way to Carter County, and remain there during the trial. Notwithstanding this there are fears entertained here for the safety of the prisoners should they be taken to Grayson without a guard of militia.

The story of the spiriting away of Cummins by the Sheriff printed in yesterday's BULLETIN originated in the fertile brain of one of our reporters. Cummins is still in jail here. Instead of the young attorneys having have been outwitted by the officers it looks now very much as if the Sheriff and other officers had been bluffed by the attorneys.

MESSRS. W. B. MATHEWS & Co's. cooper shop on Second street near the bridge is very nearly completed. It is a large building and will accommodate all the workmen their large trade requires to be employed.

COUNTY POINTS.

MAYSLEICK.

Jasper S. Hinson has gone to Florida, to select a home, having sold his place three miles above here to Wm. Maher, for $4,000, cash.

August Melsner an old and useful citizen of this place has been quite sick for a week and is still poorly.

The changes in the weather recently were very frequent and sudden, from heat to cold.

Some five or six of Mr. Wm. P. Clark's family have been down sick including himself and wife. They are mending slowly.

Uncle John Triplett, made us a social call one day this week. He is enjoying good health for one of his age; he was born June 7, 1796.

Joseph Clary, of Cynthiana, is visiting his father at this place.

A little more of the beautiful snow fell last Tuesday night.

Geo. T. Wood and son of Maysville, spent Wednesday night at the Stonewall House, in this place.

Mr. Thomas M. Fowler, who has been on the sick list for the past week, is now improving slowly.

Dull is no name for business in this place since January 1, 1883.

Whisky and beer gathers up all the loose dimes these times, and detrones reason in many instances of men of talent.

Henry Queen, a tobacco man and Otis Smith, of Cincinnati, were in this place Thursday.

The Presbyterian and the Christian churches are both without shepherds at present.

ROMEO.

A New Theory of the Ashland Murder. Catlettsburg Correspondence Louisville Commercial.

A detective who is here investigating the murder, told me to-day that he entertained the following theory in regard to the matter:

"I have ascertained," said he, "that George Ellis was never legally married to the woman whom he claimed was his wife, and I believe that it was he alone who outraged and murdered the girls."

"Upon what do you base your belief?" asked the Commercial scribe.

"Well, you see Ellis and this woman knew that Mrs. Gibbons had left the house the day before the murder was committed. He probably went there for the purpose of robbery, not knowing that Emma Carrico, the eldest of the girls, was in the house at the time, but when Ellis arrived there he ascertained that she was, and she, awaking from her sleep, at once recognized him. He then killed her with the ax first and then dispatched the other two parties, using the same weapon. That all were killed with the same ax, there is no doubt, because the crow-bar was found where it had been usually kept by old man Gibbons. My reason for believing the ax was the only weapon used to do the deadly work, is because the wound on Emma Carrico's head showed the skin to be broken in two places, from two and a half to three inches apart; that the ax was concave upon the pole, having been battered by driving iron wedges. It also shows that it was used by a right-handed person, there being blood upon the upper side of the pole and none upon the other, showing that the face of the victim was toward the murderer. In regard to the oral oil can, I believe that Ellis carried it from his own house to the Gibbons residence. In May last he moved to Ashland. One witness swore in the trial that he sold Ellis a new oil can in October; another witness, that, while the house was burning he saw a new, bright oil can in the middle of the floor. Mrs. Gibbons testified that her oil can was an old one, having been in use for five or six years, and it would therefore be dark. Ellis swore that he himself poured the oil on the bodies after they were dead. I believe the crime was committed in the early hours of the morning. Ellis' confession and testimony contradicted itself in several ways; for instance, in his first confession he said, 'Neal struck Miss Carrico with the big end of the crow-bar,' but on the trial he swore 'he hit her with the small end.' On Neal's trial he swore 'Craft went into the house first,' and on the trial of Craft, that 'Neal went in first.' His whole testimony and confession was unreasonable and contradictory."

The above theory I give for what it is worth, simply stating that but few people here believe that Ellis was alone in his devilish work, and that he was materially aided by assistants.

Carelessness in Storing Ashes.

If we could know just how many farm buildings have been destroyed by storing hot ashes in wooden vessels, the number we should find to be very large, and the number of supposed incendiary fires would probably be reduced one-half.

Farmers as a rule burn wood, the ashes of which, under favorable circumstances, retain fire for several days. It is a mistake to suppose that there is no danger of injury by fire from ashes that are removed only in the morning before the fire is kindled. Fire is often retained in large coals, which are but charred wood, for a long time after there is to the careless observer no indications of fire.

The farmer knowing the value of wood ashes is anxious to save them in the best condition, and being aware that they depreciate in value when left exposed to the rains, he is careful to put them under cover, perhaps in the wood shed adjoining the dwelling, and frequently for the want of a properly constructed place to keep them, he stores them in barrels; if he be a man of some caution he will first put them in an iron or tin vessel where they are kept until more ashes accumulate and need to be removed; he then puts them into some wooden vessel, feeling that it is a perfectly safe practice, and as a rule it is, but there are exceptions that come often enough to destroy a large amount of property every year.

For example, suppose the farmer cleans out one stove in the morning, and his wife or daughter cleans out another after breakfast; the contents of the iron vessel is put into a wooden one, almost fresh from the stove, without a thought that such is the case, and if a fire occurs in consequence, how very few will remember to inform the insurance company of all the facts relating to the storing of ashes, and how natural to declare it must be incendiary, as there had been no fire in the building. This is but one of the many ways that buildings are destroyed by ashes kept in barrels and other wooden vessels. It is never safe to use wooden vessels until the ashes are several weeks old.

The best and safest way is to build a brick or stone vault away from all farm buildings, where the ashes may all be stored that are made during the year, and where they may be loaded into a cart without filling the farm buildings full of dust.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

When he had called the meeting to order, Brother Gardner arose and said: "Gen'l'm, if it wasn't for de wheels on a wagon de wagon wouldn't move. When de wheels is on, den what?" "Grease?" solemnly exclaimed an old man. "Ker-rect!" whispered the president, softly rubbing his hands together. "We hez de wagon an' de wheels. We will now pass de hat around' for de grease."

A Portland revivalist seems never to have heard of the wise proverb about talking shop. He is by business an auctioneer, and is quoted as exclaiming in the midst of a fervid exhortation to sinners: "Twenty-nine I got; thirty, shall I have 'em? Bless the lord! Twenty-nine are saved; who will come next? Shall I have thirty?"

Not long since Lily, a little girl of five years, after saying her evening prayers began to indulge in an original petition of her own, varying it according to her moods. She was aware that she had not been particularly good on a certain day, and her evening prayers were thus supplemented: "I pray the Lord to make Lily a good little girl; and if at first you don't succeed, try, try, again."
